Attention centers on 'Guy George'

By TROY STEINER
Senior Reporter

ne melting pot at BYU has been pling over with controversy lately the main problem has been a stu- act called "The Club."

the group is led by a BYU student mimics Boy George, the con- sorial lead singer from the British ic group Culture Club. The stu- who has been caught in the mid- of all the controversy, culminating in boycott of performances by the ip on campus, is Ray Carter, a or from San Diego, Calif., major- in broadcasting.

cause of Carter's Guy George as, he has been thrust into the light and is now somewhat of a onal figure. Stories about Carter, banning of "The Club" and the d removal of Culture Club records n BYU's bookstore have hit many the nation's newspapers.

Carter has received phone calls from many publications, including Time magazine. So much criticism and negative publicity has been aimed at Carter that he said, "I just want it to die."

Carter has done his impression in public — with all the make-up, a wig with braided strands full of beads and bows and his controversial clothes — a total of five times including the night he auditioned for a job imitating Boy George.

That was how Carter got involved with the stunt in the first place.

In February a want ad from a local roller rink appeared in a Provo newspaper asking for Boy George imitators. Carter saw the ad and became interested. His motivation was twofold — fun and money, with money having the biggest influence.

Carter debuted on BYU's Cougar Cable. He appeared, with make-up and all, on "The Game" for a small segment at the end of the show. After his audition at the roller rink and the cable TV appearance, Carter made his first personal appearance.

The show, done at the skating rink on March 9, consisted of Carter appearing as "Guy George" in front of approximately 300 screaming youngsters. His performances consisted of mouthing the words to a couple of Culture Club tunes, which earned him $100 for his work.

"I know why I do it—I do it for fun and for money," Carter said. "People have to realize that when someone acts, that's exactly what they're doing—acting. I don't do it because I'm in favor of homosexuality or transvestism."

"At first I didn't realize what kind of impact I would have," said Carter. After his Cougar Cable appearance, he next took center stage on March 15 at Friday Nite Live, a BYU carnival featuring games, booths and entertainment.

He and the four members of his "air-band" — a group that mouths words and plays instruments to music as though they were the actual recording group — went on to become the headliners in a group of other air-bands.

"They had been yelling for Culture Club all night, and when we came out some girls tried to grab us," he said. Carter also appeared at a BYU Concerts Impromptu, and that was where the real trouble began.

The controversy occurred when Carter performed on campus after he thought he had been cleared by University Standards.

The problem started because of mistaken identity. Carter and many other acts that were to appear at Friday Nite Live were addressed by Robert Thorne, director of Student Programs and Organizations. When nothing was done to thwart his act, Carter thought he had been cleared to perform because he mistakenly thought that Thorne was Mike Whitaker, chairman of University Standards.

The group was banned after the impromptu performance and was told to never perform on campus again. Although Carter disagrees with the reason for the banning, he said he does not have any hard feelings for BYU or its officials because he realizes that BYU has policies it must uphold.

Carter said if he had it to do over again he would "probably not" go through with it.

"It has been blown way out of proportion," he said. "The press has been too much on the negative side. I'd like to be known for other things besides this."

Provo firemen dig Don W. Pulsipher of Spryville, out of an 8-foot trench at 600 South State Street in Provo. Pulsipher was partially buried Monday while digging and laying pipe in the trench.

Man partially buried after trench collapse

A 32-year-old Springville man is in stable condition at Utah Valley Hospital after being partially buried during a cave-in Monday morning.

Don W. Pulsipher, 661 E. 100 North, suffered a dislocated right shoulder and crushed pelvis, said Anita Kay, a public relations spokesperson at UVH.

He will be in the hospital for a few days, said Pulsipher's father, Raymond D. Pulsipher, 891 E. 600 North, Spanish Fork.

Pulsipher was in an 8-foot deep sewer trench digging and laying pipe at 600 South State, Provo, when one of the banks caved in at 10:35 a.m., said Provo Fire Chief Boyd Carter.

Another man was also in the trench, but was only buried to his knees.

"He stood up just as the dirt hit," Raymond Pulsipher said.

Carter said the nature of the soil was the cause of the cave-in.

Workers immediately called the Provo Fire Department, and in a joint effort, Pulsipher was taken out in about five to eight minutes, he said.

"Severe injuries could have occurred because of the weight of the soil," said Carter. "We expected serious injuries; so most of our time went to assessing his condition. He was in a lot of pain."

Pulsipher was working for Hone Grant Excavating, 1550 W. 2000 North, Mapleton. According to his father, Pulsipher had only been employed there for about two to three weeks.

Crew to repeat effort to repair Solar Max

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — Challenger's crewmen conserved fuel Monday for a second shot at snagging Solar Max and were given a "fighting chance" of success if their gas gauge does not drop too far during rendezvous with the struggling satellite.

If the crew can haul the sun-gazing observatory aboard with the shuttle's 50-foot mechanical arm Tuesday and if the propellant in the forward nose jets holds out, Challenger's flight might be extended until Friday.

That would allow two of the astronauts to try to repair the satellite during a cargo bay spacewalk Wednesday and put it back in space Thursday.

If Solar Max cannot be captured or has to be brought home for its overhaul, the shuttle could be back in Florida on schedule Thursday.

The amount of fuel for the shuttle's forward maneuvering jets was the big concern for Robert Crippen, Dick Scobee, Terry Hart, George Nelson and James van Hoften.

"We stand a fighting chance of pulling it off," flight director Jay Greene said Monday from mission control in Houston. "There are no guarantees."

The tricky part is to do a rendezvous without using any gas."

Challenger was prowling 60 miles from Solar Max on Monday when Crippen fired the tail control rockets to start the shuttle on a "free ride" that will close the gap to about 25 miles by the time the rendezvous maneuvers begin.

The drift was started with the tail rockets because the nose rockets had only 21 percent of their normal fuel supply left.

The nose rockets will not be needed for Challenger's return to Earth, but are crucial to the close-in part of the second approach to Solar Max.

The satellite was knocked more out of whack than ever by Nelson's failed attempt to stabilize it during his untethered spacewalk Sunday. But ground controllers managed to still the satellite's tumble and gave it a new lease on life by pointing its solar panels toward the sun to recharge its batteries.

"The opinion down here is that Solar Max is back," Jerry Ross told the astronauts from mission control in Houston.

That is outstanding news, replied Crippen.

The satellite was so stable that the redemption retrieval attempt was delayed from Monday to Tuesday so Solar Max could be rotated very slowly to put it in the right position to be grabbed by the shuttle's mechanical arm.

Crippen will park Challenger underneath the satellite, and Hart will use the snare on the end of the robot arm to latch onto a grapple fixture on the side of Solar Max.

He made four unsuccessful grabs for the satellite Sunday after Nelson was foiled by a faulty docking device. Solar Max is expected to be an easier target now that it is stabilized.

Once Hart makes his catch, the arm will lower the satellite into a frame at the end of the shuttle's cargo bay.

If the repairs proceed, Nelson and Van Hoften will try to squeeze what was originally scheduled to have been two days of space mechanics into one.

Their key job is to replace Solar Max's altitude control box so scientists can again precisely point it toward the sun. They also are scheduled to swap out one of the satellite's solar panels and put a cover on the satellite that has been working at partial capacity since November 1980.

If they cannot do the tuneup job, Solar Max will be stowed in the work frame to hitch a ride back to Florida with the astronauts.

Heritage officials withdraw request for federal grant

By PHILIP BOAS
Senior Reporter

Heritage Mountain Ski Resort developers withdrew an application for a $10 million federal grant, knowing that their bid would be rejected if they did not remove it from consideration.

Howard Buckalter, a spokesman for the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development at the Denver regional office, said that he believed the developers withdrew their Urban Development Action Grant application because it would not be accepted. "That was the clear implication. The application in the form we had it was not approvable."

Buckalter said the application would not have been accepted because the developers could not prove they had the money to build the project. "The private financial commitments were not there. . . . They were representing in the application financial commitments totaling something like $200 million and we simply had no evidence of that."

Heritage Mountain sent a letter to HUD regional offices in Denver on March 23 requesting that the application be withdrawn; however, HUD headquarters in Washington, D.C., went ahead and judged the application, unaware of the withdrawal letter.

Jack Flynn, HUD public affairs director in Washington, D.C., said the last day for information to be submitted for grant applications was March 16 and that he did not know about the withdrawal letter. After reviewing the application HUD determined that the document was to receive "no further consideration."

"In a shorthand way, the problem was that they did not have any evidence of private financial commitment, and we didn't feel that they would be able to produce that commitment."

Though Washington, D.C., officials did not know about the withdrawal letter, the application will be recorded as "withdrawn," said Buckalter. "It's a matter of a paper trail catching up with the factory."

Did Washington have enough financial information to make the judgment they made? "There wasn't any financial commitment at all. No firm financial commitment — no competitive project — is what it amounts to," said Buckalter.

Soft Denver didn't have knowledge of a financial commitment, Washington didn't either. "That's right. We basically have an arrangement where they will ask us what the regional office thinks of it, and I said, 'Well, we don't have a complete package.'"

"We recommended to them (Washington) that the application not be funded, and subsequently the withdrawal letter came in."

Ron Madsen, Provo director of redevelopment, said, "I'm sure if we felt it was going to be funded we would have left the application in."

Having recently talked to Heritage Mountain officials, Madsen said, "What they want to do is repackaging and resubmit the application."

In an April 6 article in the Provo Daily Herald, Mayor James Ferguson was quoted as saying, "I talked to Mr. (Gary) Williamson (Heritage Mountain president), and he said they had talked it over and had decided to cover the gap in their financing another way. But Heritage is going ahead."

In reaction to the article, Buckalter said, "Oh boy, then they wouldn't need a UDAG at all."

Ferguson told The Daily Universe that the developers did not say how they plan to make up the financial gap. "They might even come back with a (UDAG) resubmittal later. I don't know what they'll do."

Last week, The Daily Universe quoted Madsen from an interview conducted two months ago as saying resort construction would be pushed back a year if the project did not get the UDAG in March.

Since then, Madsen has told the Provo Daily Herald that he was "misinterpreted." He later told The Daily Universe, "It sounded like it was a quote made after we found out we weren't getting the UDAG."

Although Madsen's first statement was published in the April 4 issue, it had been introduced in The Daily Universe article as a quote from an interview conducted Feb. 16.

Asked if he still believes the construction will be pushed back a year that the application has been withdrawn, he said, "I don't know. If I were them and I had gotten that far along, I would try something else."

Asked if he still believes the city is working with developers to find means of aiding them with their financing, "I've set a time. We can only submit a UDAG in the month of April or we'll have to wait until July to do it again. If something isn't going in that direction by next Tuesday, then it will be a little difficult."

Commission to examine resort plans

Heritage Mountain developers are facing the same problem they have faced for decades: the inability to prove they have sufficient financial backing to build their multi-million dollar ski resort.

The project was going to be considered for final plan approval by the Provo City Planning Commission this Wednesday night, but developers have been unable to demonstrate to the U.S. Forest Service that they can fund the Minimum Operable Unit — the smallest portion of the project that can operate as a ski resort.

The planning commission has demanded that they receive a written statement from the Forest Service indicating that the $18 million Minimum Operable Unit has been funded.

In a memo to the planning commission, City Attorney Glen Ellis wrote that the planning commission does not need to concern themselves with the financial issue, and recommended that they legally approve the project without financial statements.

"There is nothing in the (final plan approval) ordinance that I can see that makes the feasibility of the other issues," said Neil Lindberg, assistant community development director.

The planning commission hearing on the Heritage Mountain project will still be held "to solve some of the other issues," said Neil Lindberg, assistant community development director.

Demo candidates blitz Pennsylvania, pursue voters' nods in primary

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Walter Mondale and Gary Hart dueling Monday for the popular vote in Tuesday's Pennsylvania presidential primary, but Mondale is likely to win the contest for the state's 172 Democratic delegates by a large margin.

The outcome of the popular contest may hinge on how many votes civil rights activist Jesse Jackson attracts, especially in Philadelphia where more than 40 percent of the registered Democrats are black.

However, Mondale has the edge on national convention delegates because he has full slates of 117 delegates running in separate races in the 23 congressional districts. Hart had only 47 of his own and had to borrow 70 more from candidates who dropped out of the race. Another 55 delegates are apportioned statewide based on the outcome of the delegate races in the congressional districts.

Hart's 70 adopted delegates are not identified with his name on the Pennsylvania ballot, making it difficult for his supporters to tell which ones to choose.

A Philadelphia Daily News poll on the eve of the primary showed the contest neck and neck. Mondale had 30.7 percent, Hart 26.6 percent and Jackson 9.2 percent, with 32.1 percent saying they had not yet decided how to vote. The poll of 885 registered Democrats was taken Friday through Sunday.

Pollsters said a significant number of those questioned were not positive of their preference and might change before election day.

The Washington Post/ABC poll, taken Wednesday through Sunday, also showed a close race with Mondale at 41 percent, Hart at 39 percent and Jackson at 14 percent, with a 4 percent margin of error.

Hart and Mondale blitzed the state Monday in a last-ditch scramble for votes while Jackson began the day in Pittsburgh and finished it in his Philadelphia stronghold.

Hart told longshoremen on the Philadelphia docks that the difference between him and Mondale is, "Nobody owns me."

Hart told the group of his program to modernize ailing industries and re-train workers and to use some of the billions of dollars, saved by canceling the MX missile and B-1 bomber, to dredge the Delaware River and create jobs.

"I am not a career politician. After I'm president, I'm not going to run for office anymore, because my goal is not to hold public office," he said. "It's to do something for this country and for my children, particularly the nuclear arms race."

Soviets take punch at Reagan

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union accused President Reagan on Monday of using the Olympics for political gain, charging there have been "slandorous allegations" and "open threats" of violence against Soviet athletes and officials.

"The U.S. administration is trying to use the Olympic games on the eve of the elections for its selfish political ends," said a statement from the Soviet National Olympic Committee, carried by the official news agency Tass.

Moscow has not yet said whether it will participate in the summer games in Los Angeles. The United States and several other Western nations boycotted the 1980 Moscow Olympics to protest the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

"President Reagan submitted to the International Olympic Committee written guarantees of the U.S. government's respect for the traditions, rules and provisions of the Olympic charter," the statement said.

However, facts show that these obligations and guarantees are not respected in a number of major matters, the statement charged.

In particular, the statement said, "a coalition called Ban The Soviets, enjoying the support of the U.S. official services, has been set up."

The group, headed by an Anaheim, Calif., businessman, was formed after the Sept. 1 downing of a South Korean jetliner by a Soviet fighter jet. Members say they will stage protests at the Olympics against the Soviets and encourage defections by Soviet athletes, spectators and journalists.

The Soviet statement charged that "open threats of physical victimization and provocative actions are made to sportsmen and officials of the U.S.S.R. and other socialist countries." It did not give names.

In Washington, White House spokesman Larry Speakes declined comment on the accusations in Moscow, but said generally, "We've tried to be very accommodative to the Soviets in preparation for the Olympics."

Hitchhikers may have been slaves at Texas ranch

KERRVILLE, Texas (UPI) — As many as 75 hitchhikers may have been lured to a ranch and forced into slavery by ranch owners who used cattle prods and chains, a sheriff said Monday.

Officers with a search warrant Friday found five men and a woman living in a barn on a secluded ranch 75 miles northwest of San Antonio. They were placed in protective custody.

One victim said he was forced to burn the body of a dead worker. Authorities sent charred bones found on the ranch to the Texas Department of Safety for testing.

DPS spokesman Larry Todd said results of the tests won't be available for several days.

The search warrant was issued after a worker escaped from the ranch March 28 and called authorities.

Authorities were searching for another hitchhiker, who left the Central Texas ranch two weeks ago, Kerr County Sheriff Cliff Greeson said. The sheriff said the unidentified hitchhiker told his story to a motorist who bought him a cup of coffee.

Greeson said authorities may try to locate about 75 others who worked at the 3,500-acre cattle, goat and sheep ranch last year.

Wesley Ellebracht, 58; his son, Wesley Ellebracht Jr., 31; and the younger man's wife Joyce Ellebracht, 29, were charged with aggravated kidnapping and were being held in lieu of $100,000 bonds.

Two East Germans try to escape under fire

BERLIN (UPI) — East German border guards fired at two men scrambling over the Berlin wall during the night, apparently hitting one of them and preventing his escape, West German officials said Monday.

The West German government condemned the incident as undermining relations between the two countries.

People living close to the wall in the Neukölln district of the American-run sector of the divided city said they heard bursts of firing late Sunday from East German watch towers, West Berlin police said.

The guards apparently opened fire when they spotted two men scrambling over the 13-foot wall, raking the barrier with gunfire and apparently hitting one of the would-be escapees, the police said.

A 20-year-old East German walked into a city police station two hours after the incident and said he escaped across the wall.

He said his companion, caught with him on top of the wall when the guards opened fire, did not make it into the western sector and probably had been shot.

Police officers who visited the scene after the shooting saw eight East German soldiers inspecting the wall and border installations, a police spokesman said.

Pope makes changes

Catholic government

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Pope John Paul II is sweeping changes Monday in the government of the Roman Catholic Church, delegating much of the authority and appointing a black African to a key Vatican post.

In other news, the pope has made such sweeping changes at one time in the Vatican's history.

The pope chose Secretary of State Agostino Casaroli to run the Vatican city-state. In a handwritten letter, John Paul gave the Italian cardinal a special mandate "to represent him in the powers representative inherent in his sovereignty in the city of Vatican City."

He also named Cardinal Bernard Gantin, 62, of Senegal, as the first black African to head a congregation, a division of the Vatican government. Gantin became prefect of the Sacred Congregation of Bishops.

Soviet Union accused of bombarding NATO

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci accused the Soviet Union on Monday of bombarding NATO "with a diplomatic propaganda offensive and urged the allies to get the 'wrecking narcotic of isolationism.'"

Salt Lake breach workers yet preparation go-ahead

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — A court-approved agreement lets workers to prepare to punch a gigantic hole in the railroad causeway on Great Salt Lake, but the actual breach must wait for a full court hearing in May.

S. District Judge Aldon J. Anderson on Thursday approved agreement negotiated between the state, Southern Pacific and Great Salt Lake Minerals and Chemicals Co. to punch a 300-foot-long hole in the causeway that traps fresh water from the mountain snow in the south arm of the lake and leaves north end highly concentrated with minerals.

Breach stipulations

The arrangement stipulates that if work crews are ready to punch the hole sooner than anticipated, the state and Southern Pacific must notify Great Salt Lake Minerals and the court before breach takes place.

Under the most favorable work conditions imaginable, we anticipate we can be ready to punch the hole by the end of June," said Hannah Whitney, public relations director of the Utah Department of Transportation and spokeswoman of the newly created State Flood Control Office.

Federal lawsuit

The agreement is the result of a lawsuit Great Salt Lake Minerals filed in federal court. The suit seeks an injunction against the breach until further impact studies can be conducted.

Indians live in poverty, government 'negligent,' Indian director testifies

VAIWEAP MARINA, Ariz. (UPI) — One man many Indians live in poverty is the federal government's negligence in developing reservation economies, despite the government's spending of millions of dollars to assist native Americans.

That was the conclusion Monday of Utah Division of Indian Affairs Director Bruce Parry, who testified before the Presidential Commission on Indian Affairs.

Parry said an example of the government's failure in Indian policy was the attempt by the Utah Division of Indian Affairs in 1976 to use part of a $10 million federal grant to develop oil-rich Navajo land for economic development on reservations.

Between 1939 and 1976, all the money derived from the oil royalties was used for health, education and general welfare of the Navajo Indians living in Navajo County, Utah, he said.

But Parry said commission members realized the necessity for the Indians to become self-sufficient and decided to develop a self-sustaining economy on the reservation.

He said a corporation was organized to provide opportunities for Navajos, provide management training and to make a profit, which in turn would be used to create other business opportunities.

The first objective was realized to an extent by creating several business ventures," Parry said. Several Navajo people have been involved in the management of these enterprises, receiving valuable management experience."

But, he said the third objective was not met. "With the exception of one year, all of the enterprises have lost money. Continued subsidization is necessary for the businesses to continue to survive."

"So long as we are surrounded by an unbroken ring of Soviet armaments and bombarded by Soviet propaganda that can work on our public opinion from the sanctuary of a country that permits no public opinion, we can never be completely free," he said.

Weinberger made the speech to the Harvard Club of Washington five days after returning from a meeting of NATO defense ministers in Turkey where he encountered skepticism about administration plans to launch a $26 billion research program into a "Star Wars" anti-missile defense of the United States.

On a one-day stop in Holland before the NATO meeting, Weinberger met with members of the Dutch parliament about their forthcoming vote about missile deployment.

North Koreans walk out of meeting with South

PANMUNJOM, Korea (UPI) — North Korean delegates walked out of a meeting Monday on forming a joint athletic team for the summer Olympic Games after South Korea asked them to apologize for the October bombing attack in Burma.

The 24-hour meeting at Panmunjom, a village 35 miles north of Seoul where the 1953 Korean armistice was signed, ended in arguments about the terrorist attack and a kidnapping South Korea claims was committed by North Korea.

The stormy session Monday cast doubt on the future of inter-Korean dialogue, although Chung Ju-yung, president of the (South) Korean Amateur Sports Association, said his country would try to resume the meeting next week.

The session got off to a noisy start when both sides tried to present opening statements at the same time. As the two chief delegates spoke simultaneously, their voices were drowned out by shouts and jeers from both sides.

The two sides quickly plunged into a heated exchange over the alleged North Korean bombing attack in Burma last October.

Gunmen shake Beirut with sporadic gunfire

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Sporadic fighting shook Beirut on Monday, with battles between Moslem and Christian gunmen lending new urgency to President Amin Gemayel's efforts to stop the bloodshed in meetings with factional leaders.

The clashes with machine guns, rocket-propelled grenades and Jeep-mounted cannons lasted for about two hours, shortly before Gemayel discussed plans with the rival groups for a cease-fire and separation of warring militiamen.

A barrage of artillery shells fired by Moslem rebels slammed into Christian east Beirut and its suburbs, Christian Phalangist radio said. There was no immediate report on casualties.

New defense proposal a threat, says Woerner

BONN, West Germany (UPI) — President Reagan's "star wars" proposal to develop missile-destroying satellites threatens to destabilize East-West security and split the NATO alliance, Defense Minister Manfred Woerner said Monday.

Woerner, in an interview with the Hanover Allgemeine Zeitung newspaper, also warned such a move could diminish western Europe's military role in the West's defense efforts.

"This will be the main topic of discussion over the next few years," Woerner said. He said the "star wars" concept envisaged by the two superpowers could radically alter the existing security framework, which rests on the premise that neither side would risk the devastation of a nuclear counter-attack.

Judge seeks CIA records in civil rights violation case

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — A federal judge wants to review CIA documents to determine if releasing them to a man who claims his civil rights were violated would harm national security.

U.S. District Court Judge David Winder continued a Freedom of Information Act hearing until next Monday while he reviews 60 pages of documents reportedly compiled on Les Lasater, Salt Lake City.

Lasater has asked the judge to use the power of the FOIA and order the CIA and FBI to turn over documents compiled on him. He said he believes the documents would prove the two agencies harassed him while he lived in Finland.

Lasater, represented by the American Civil Liberties Union, filed a lawsuit against the two agencies, demanding the release of classified information through the FOIA.

Lasater claims the FBI and CIA harassed him when he lived in Finland in 1978 and 1979. He said the harassment began after he refused to persuade a friend who was a Finnish military officer to give the U.S. agencies information about the Finnish armed services.

He said after he refused to help the agencies, anonymous telephone calls began telling his wife he was seeing other women. He also said funds he had transferred on a regular basis from his bank account in Utah to Helsinki for living expenses began to disappear.

Lasater said he suspected the FBI and asked them to stop the harassment. He claimed in the lawsuit that agents did not deny the harassment, but asked him if he had any proof.

He said when he and his Finnish-born wife tried to travel to Utah in 1979, his wife was denied a passport and was not allowed to leave.

Snyder varies hitting repertoire

Cougars unload for 30 runs

By ROD CHRISTIANSEN
Senior Reporter

BYU decided to take batting practice Monday, and after their initial swings, the Cougars thought it was so fun they continued on throughout the duration of the game against the Air Force Academy, using 28 hits to score 30 runs.

The Cougars ended the game — or the makeshift batting practice — with a 30-8 victory and a 4-0 record in WAC play.

Cougar shortstop Cory Snyder, who has been lacking in his usual home run production this year, decided to punt for a hit in the early going.

"The punt was my own idea," said Snyder after the game. "I've bunted only one other time, and that came in the Cal Riverside game where I went 6-for-6. It works every so often because the other team isn't expecting it."

After being successful with the punt, Snyder decided to tackle something else and found the home run to his liking, hitting three — including a mammoth grand slam in the third inning.

"I want to hit the ball hard whenever I get up no matter what the situation," said Snyder. "It's getting a lot of sliders and pitches that are out of the strike zone, so it's fun to see a good fastball every now and then."

In addition to the three homers, Snyder accounted for 10 RBIs, tying Jim Armstrong's school record set in 1963.

While Snyder was busy collecting 15 total bases on the day (a new school record), his home run hitting became infectious as five other Cougars added four-baggers. Eric Varoz put the Cougars ahead to stay as he hit a three-run blast in the second giving the Cougars a 5-2 lead.

The Flyboys got close in the third as they scored two runs off starter Wally Ritchie. However, Ritchie, a freshman southpaw from Glendale, Calif., shut out the Cadets over the next four innings in capturing the first victory of his career at BYU.

"Wally's best pitch is his forkball," said Steve Eager, Ritchie's battery mate. "But, today it just wasn't working the way it should. Instead he used the bases (curve and fastball) to get the job done."

"Wally was a little shaky today," added Cougar Head Coach Gary Pullins. "I think the reason he couldn't get his forkball over today was because it was so cold he couldn't separate his fingers far enough. He's done a great job for us this year though. I hope to get him into the starting rotation soon — he's going to be a good one."

The Cougars broke the game open in the bottom of the third as designated hitter Nate Hyde came up with the bases loaded and slammed a Kel Christianson pitch over the fence for a grand slam.

Air Force sent in relief pitcher Dan Miller and found the Cougars were just getting their bats warmed up. Miller gave up singles to David Willes and third baseman Marc Matsubara and then loaded the bases with Cougars as Varoz drew a walk.

Snyder then launched his grand slam blast and the Cougars had a commanding 13-4 advantage.

Centerfielder Jim Mecate homered in the fifth, with Eager and Snyder adding solo shots to complete the fifth run. Brett Varoz rounded out the home run derby as he hit his third of the year.

BYU and Air Force wind up the three-game series with a doubleheader today starting at noon.

"The thing that pleased me most today was the aggressive play of our infielders," said Pullins. "I hope with the outcome of today's game the players don't relax and take Air Force too lightly tomorrow."

This collision at home plate was not the only hitting the BYU baseball team did Monday. The Cougars erupted for 30 runs and 28 hits in downing Air Force 30-8.

Denver rambles by Express; Young gains 301 total yards

DENVER (UPD) — Craig Penrose threw a 73-yard scoring pass and David Martin ran back a punt 79 yards Monday night to carry the big-play Denver Gold to their fourth straight victory, a 35-27 triumph over the Los Angeles Express.

The Gold, 6-1, struck for 25 points in the second quarter by capitalizing on electrifying runs and Express fumbles, and then used the barreling running of Bo Matthews, Harry Sydney and Bill Johnson for 147 combined yards to extend their USFL Pacific Division lead to three games.

Rookie quarterback Steve Young accounted for 301 yards of total offense. The former BYU All-American led the Express to a 14-0 lead and later he connected with running back Kevin Nelson on a 69-yard scoring pass. In the waning seconds, he tackled on a 1-yard touchdown run.

But Penrose, shedding his conservative ways, found wide receiver Kevin Williams with the bomb and then directed an errorless offense as the Gold posted a second win this season over the Express.

Sydney, Johnson and Vincent White each scored on short runs and Brian Speelman kicked a 27-yard field goal.

For the Express, Nelson scored a second time on a 2-yard run and cornerback Dwight Drane ran an interception back 22 yards for a score.

Drane's score gave the Express a 14-0 lead 9:37 into the game, but the Gold struck back suddenly in front of a foot-pounding crowd that braved rain and 40-degree temperatures.

In the final four minutes of the half, the Gold scored three touchdowns on a 14-yard electrifying return and two scores that followed two Express fumbles on consecutive kickoff returns.

Penrose completed 12-of-20 passes for 186 yards while Young was 16-of-37 for 267 yards and rushed for 34 yards on seven carries.

White's hearing gets postponed

MCKINNEY, Texas (UPD) — A plea hearing for Dallas Cowboys quarterback Danny White, accused of punching a 17-year-old high school football player during a traffic incident, was postponed until May, court officials said Monday.

White had been expected to plead innocent and request a jury trial at the hearing scheduled for Monday.

Court officials could not say why the hearing was postponed until May 7. White's attorney, Pat Davis of Dallas, was not available for comment.

White was charged with the class A misdemeanor after Jon Michael Clark, who plays tight end on the Plano High School football team, said White hit him in the jaw during a traffic argument on a rural road north of Dallas on Feb. 25.

Clark also said the Cowboy quarterback forced his car off the road before the two began to argue.

If convicted of the charge, White could be sentenced to up to a year in jail and fined $2,000.

Eyestone qualifies for NCAA meet, Cougars edged by San Diego State

By DOUG FOX
Staff Writer

Only 55 hundredths of a second separated the top three runners in the 10,000 meter run at Saturday's Nike Invitational Track Meet. BYU's All-American Ed Eyestone finished second in the photo-finish race with a time of 27:56.06.

Eyestone's time shattered the former BYU school record by more than a minute, qualifying him for the NCAA Outdoor Championships and the Summer Olympics.

While Eyestone was in Eugene, Ore., for the Nike Invitational, the rest of the Cougars were in San Diego for a dual meet with the Aztecs. San Diego State edged BYU in a close contest 83-80. Stefan Fernholm led the Cougar effort with a 215-5 toss in the discus, the third longest ever recorded by a collegiate athlete. Fernholm's throw is the third longest ever in the NCAA and the longest this year.

Eyestone, coming off a sixth-place finish in the World Cross Country Championships in New York, was edged out by Canada's Paul Williams by a mere 14 hundredths of a second. Williams' time of 27:55.92 set a new Canadian national record. Alberto Salazar was third at 27:56.47.

Coach Clarence Robison said Eyestone's time was the best by an American this year.

"That's not only world class running, it's one of the best times by an American in several years," said Robison of Eyestone's time.

Robison said he also expects Eyestone to do well in the Olympics. "He has an excellent chance in not only making the team (Olympic) but placing well in Los Angeles."

Eyestone has competed three times on the world class level. In 1980 he finished third in the world on the junior level, winning the bronze.

In San Diego, the Cougars swept the top three positions in the 5,000 meters and the discus and won eight events, but it came up barely short of San Diego's 83-point effort. Soren Tallhem led BYU with a season-best 258-0 throw in the javelin and two third-place finishes in the hammer and the discus. Behind Fernholm in the discus were Lars Sandin and Tallhem. BYU also swept the 5,000 meters with Lin Whatcott taking first recording a time of 14:29.17. Steve Chipman and Andy DiConti took second and third respectively.

DiConti won the 1,500 meters running to a time of 3:50.66. Mikko Valimäki was a winner in the hammer with a toss of 209.8. John Bestor equalled his season-best pole vault mark of 16-6 to win that event.

The remaining winners for the Cougars were Todd Sanders and Francis Clark. Sanders' 50-5 1/4 took the triple jump and Clark's 9:26.22 won the 3,000 meter steeplechase.

Robison said he was pleased with the Cougars' efforts at the meet even though they were edged out by the Aztecs. "I was generally pleased. I feel we did well. If we would have had Ed (Eyestone) we would have had enough points to win," he said.

Robison also praised Fernholm's throw in the discus. "That's the third-best throw by a collegian. He's also an excellent shot putter and hammer thrower."

The Cougars return to Provo for their first home meet of the season this Saturday as they compete in their own invitational.

Perez released from jail, faces meeting with Kuhn

SANTIAGO, Dominican Republic (UPI)—Atlanta Braves pitcher Pascual Perez, still predicting he can win 20 games this season, was freed from prison Monday but still faces a meeting with Commissioner Bowie Kuhn before he can resume his career.

Perez, 26, was released from San Luis prison after prosecutor general Miguel Garcia Cordero decided not to appeal his conviction on a reduced charge of cocaine possession. The lanky righthander said he would return to Atlanta either Wednesday or Thursday.

"I'm confident I'm going to win 20 games this season despite being so many days late," said Perez, who was cheered and clapped on the back by a crowd of fans on leaving the prosecutor's office.

"Being out on the street again makes me feel like a new man and confident I will never be in trouble with the law again."

While Perez said he was ready to pitch immediately, Braves General Manager John Mullen said in Atlanta Perez to New York to meet with Kuhn as soon as he arrives in Atlanta. Kuhn's office has been investigating the Perez case, and he could face disciplinary action.

Chuck Adams, a spokesman for the commissioner's office, said Kuhn had no immediate comment to make on Perez's status.

Cougar ruggers beat Utes, prepare for regional action

By TROY STEINER
Senior Reporter

The BYU rugby team finished its regular season on Saturday with a 33-11 trouncing of the University of Utah at Haws Field.

The Cougars are 9-0 this year and have a berth in the West Regionals on April 26 against the Cal Berkeley Golden Bears, the top-ranked team in the nation.

In the final regular season game the Cougars outlasted the Utes while displaying their explosive offense.

In the early part of the game, both teams tried to mount an advantage but could not break through the defenses. The Cougars held the ball in the Utes' end of the field for the majority of the first 10 minutes. The first score came with 14 minutes gone in the first half. Mark Ormsby connected on a 50-yard penalty kick to give the Cougars a 3-0 lead.

The Utes retaliated and scored a try making the score 4-3 in favor of Utah. The next points came when BYU fullback, Elvin Hansen, kicked the ball to the end zone and grabbed the loose ball for another Cougar try. Ormsby made the points after, making the score 9-4.

Another scoring exchange occurred when Utah kicked a penalty for a 9-7 total. The Cougars came tight back and answered it with a try scored by Ross Dapper. After that BYU dominated the rest of the game only allowing Utah one other score late in the second half.

The first half scoring ended when a Utah miscue gave Lance Watene a shot at the loose ball which he capitalized on to score a try. The points after failed but the halftime lead was 17-7.

The second half was all BYU and Watene as the Cougars rolled off 10 points before the Utes could do anything.

Henry Williams stole the ball and dove in for a BYU try for the first of the Cougars' second-half scores. Ormsby connected and the score was 25-7.

Watene then scored two Cougar tries to the Utes' one, making the score 33-11 after one of the BYU points after kick was good. "We played a good game," BYU Coach John Seggar said. "The forwards did well rucking and mauling."

The Cougars will face an all-star squad in an exhibition game to help the BYU ruggers prepare to meet Cal-Berkeley. The game is set for April 26 in the first round of the West Regionals. "We have a good crack at it," Seggar said.

"We have a lot of work to do but experience-wise we have an edge on them," Seggar said.

The two teams have played twice the past three years with Berkeley winning both games. Last year the Cougars had to play the Golden Bears immediately after their first round match with Long Beach State and fatigue played a big factor in that Cougar performance, according to Seggar.

"This year we have a better chance," Seggar said. "They aren't as strong as last year and we are stronger."

The BYU bowling team traveled to Denver, April 5-6 for the National Collegiate Sectional Bowling Tournament and came away with third place in the women's competition and a fourth place among the men.

Pre-tournament favorite Wichita State won both the men's and women's competition.

BYU's Kevin Switzer, a junior from Kohala, Hawaii, majoring in administrative management, was the top bowler in the tournament. He had a total pin fall of 473 and a 204 average. He also bowled a 269—the high game of the journey.

According to BYU Coach Shafter Bown, Switzer's attitude and enthusiasm have made him the team leader this season.

Barb Edwards of Wichita State had the high average of the tournament for the women at 186. She also rolled a high game of 245.

SYNERGY IS:

Just ask this American Synergy representative. Dean Sessions earned over $17,000 last summer with Synergy. And that was his first year. Dean will be back for more this summer. So will many more college students.

American Synergy is an established energy products company (insulation and foam) based in Provo, but working primarily in California. That's because the California utility companies have made the purchase of our products financially attractive for consumers.

As a result, it's also financially attractive for American Synergy representatives. Very attractive. Our reps will make between $7,000 and $15,000 in 16 weeks this summer. Some, like Dean Sessions, will make considerably more than that.

Actually, what we offer is more of a service opportunity than a sales job. The reason is simple. People are already receptive to our top-notch products. They recognize the need for them. So, you win big, and your customers win big.

But the benefits aren't just financial. You see, American Synergy is a subsidiary of Eagle Systems International, the company that wrote the book on effective summer job training.

In fact, the know-how and career skills we'll teach you are often more valuable than your earnings. At least that's what past employees say. (In many instances, our training was the key to a very appealing job upon graduation.)

However, the most immediate and tangible reward is the money and the freedom it creates. What you earn can easily support you all next year. In fine style.

But we won't force the job on you. There are plenty of interested people without doing that.

If you'd like to be part of that group, come attend a brief—and casual—meeting this Wednesday at 8 p.m. at the address shown below. Or call Gary Laney, 225-9000.

Spaulding headed for tryouts

Cougar receives invitation to U.S. Olympic team trials

Tresa Spaulding, BYU's 6-foot-7 freshman center, has been selected by the Amateur Basketball Association to try out for the United States women's Olympic basketball team.

"I'm really excited," Spaulding said. "Those who were chosen are the players I worked out with last summer."

"This is a great opportunity for me."

Spaulding played on the World University Games team last summer in the United States and Canada.

She is from Meridian, Idaho, where she was a four-time prep All-American at Meridian High School.

The preliminary trials will begin April 20, and 80 athletes who qualified to try out will attend. Spaulding is among the 27 athletes invited to compete in the final trials on April 21-22.

All the players invited to the final trials were members of the World Championship, Pan American or World University Games teams.

In her first season as a Cougar, Spaulding led BYU in scoring, rebounding, shot blocking and field-goal shooting percentage. She averaged 16 points per game and 7.4 rebounds. Spaulding blocked a total of 93 shots for a 4.2 game average and shot 55 percent from the field.

In the middle of the season, she missed four complete games and saw limited action in others because of an injury. Her return to the Cougars' lineup helped move the team out in front in the conference race.

Spaulding and her BYU teammates won the 1984 High Country Athletic Conference championship. In the final regular-season game of the year, BYU upended the Runnin' Utes of Utah 75-70 to clinch the crown.

Spaulding led the Cougars with 16 points, five rebounds and blocked two shots.

The BYU team received a automatic bid to the NCAA tournament with their HCAC championship. The Cougars lost to the eventual champions, Southern California, in the first round.

Spaulding was named HCAC Player of the Week for the week of Feb. 12-18. In that time, she led the Cougars to a win over Utah, scoring 27 points.

She also pulled down five rebounds and blocked five shots — two more than the entire Utah team — in 31 minutes of playing time.

Among the 27 players invited to the final trials are former collegiate stars Carol Mencken-Schaudt, Anne Donovan, LaTayna Pollard and Lynette Woodard.

Jack Morris, Eddie Milner named players of the week

NEW YORK (UPI) — Jack Morris of the Detroit Tigers, who hurled his first career no-hitter Saturday against the Chicago White Sox in Comiskey Park, Monday was named the unanimous choice as the American League Player of the Week.

Morris, who became the first Detroit pitcher to hurl a no-hitter since Jim Bunning's effort in 1958, also beat Minnesota 8-1 on April 3 and was 2-0 for the week with an 0.56 ERA. Morris also equaled the record for the earliest no-hitter at the start of a season — Houston's Ken Forsch no-hit Atlanta on April 7, 1979.

Others receiving consideration for the award were Mickey Hatcher of Minnesota, Bruce Hurst of Boston, Jim Gantner of Milwaukee and Jack Pesante of Seattle.

Eddie Milner of the Cincinnati Reds was named the National League player of the week, it was announced Monday by league president Chub Feeney.

Milner hit .571 during the week and was 8-for-14 with five RBI, including a double and three-run homer in an opening day victory against the New York Mets.

This is the first time the outfielder, a native of Columbus, Ohio, has been named as player of the week.

Other players receiving consideration for the award included Johnny Ray of Pittsburgh, Joaquin Andujar of St. Louis, Tony Gwynn of San Diego.

Rangers still underdogs in series with Islanders

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

The New York Rangers have good reason to consider themselves the underdogs in their deciding playoff elimination game Tuesday night against the New York Islanders.

The Rangers have not won a Stanley Cup since 1940, while the Islanders have won four straight. The Islanders will also have the home-ice advantage.

Perhaps most important, the Rangers will be without Barry Beck, their captain and star defenseman. Beck suffered a separated shoulder in the Rangers' 4-1 loss to the Islanders on Sunday and will likely be out the rest of the season.

Obviously, we will miss him," Rangers coach Herb Brooks said of Beck. "But we can't say, 'We've lost him and now we're not going to show up.'"

Islander goaltender Billy Smith noted, "You don't like to see anybody get hurt. But if someone is going to get hurt, missing Beck hurts them the most."

In the other division semifinal game Tuesday, Chicago meets the North Stars at Minnesota.

In the division finals beginning Thursday, Quebec and Montreal meet in Quebec, and Calgary confronts the Oilers in Edmonton.

The winner of the Rangers-Islanders game plays Washington, while either the Hawks or North Stars will face the St. Louis Blues.

The Islanders, seeking a fifth consecutive Stanley Cup, were down 1-0 entering the third period Sunday but bounced back on goals by John Tonelli, Brent Sutter, Clark Gillies and Bryan Trottier.

"You don't count anybody out," said Islander coach Al Arbour. "You don't count us out. When it's necessary to do something to win, we come through. The team showed a lot of determination."

"We were still very confident at the end of the second period, still in control."

Despite the loss of Beck, Brooks is approaching Tuesday's game at the Nassau Coliseum in Uniondale, N.Y., with confidence.

"The pressure's on them, not on us," he said. "I'm very happy with our play over the first four games."

The playoff series between the Minnesota North Stars and Chicago Black Hawks is down to a "best-of-one" battle at the Met Sports Center in Bloomington, Minn., Tuesday night, with both clubs expecting a struggle.

The two Norris Division rivals were tied at two games apiece in the best-of-five series after Chicago rallied for two goals in the last eight minutes to edge Minnesota 4-3 on Sunday.

"I expect another very difficult game," North Stars coach Bill Mahoney said. "Both teams have played with tremendous intensity and I don't expect any difference now."

"We have the advantage of playing in our own building. We see that as a positive situation for us."

Aerobics provides fitness fun with rhythmic music

By MANDY JEAN WOODS
Senior Reporter

One of the most enduring and fashionable fads to come out of the last decade is physical fitness. In gyms and homes across the country, people have been strutting and kicking, hopping and skipping, having fun and getting fit at the same time.

It isn't widely known, but this craze was kicked off about 15 years ago by Dr. Kenneth H. Cooper, who revolutionized America's exercise habits with his startling discoveries in aerobic exercise.

He wrote two books, "Jogging" and "Aerobics," which captured the attention of the American public and gave them new direction for keeping fit.

As director of the Aerospace Medical Laboratory at Lackland Air Force Base in San Antonio, Texas, Cooper designed a fitness program for men in the service.

As a result of his research, he was appointed to develop a conditioning and training program for U.S. Air Force astronauts.

Shortly after this, Cooper resigned from the Air Force and opened his own clinic in Dallas.

Jackie Sorenson, a dancer from the University of California at Berkeley, added a new dimension to Cooper's theories when she appeared at his Dallas laboratory and tested out at a higher level of fitness than anyone had ever done before.

Using her as a model, Cooper began choreographing with dance routines to music—the birth of aerobics.

According to Dr. Phyllis Jacobson, chairman of the Dance Department at BYU, aerobics is a fitness activity that combines principles of dance, calisthenics and aerobics.

"Aerobics means, 'with oxygen.' Any act of a rhythmic and continuous nature that allows the body's systems to be exercised over a long period of time, can be aerobic," she said. Aerobics particularly emphasize exercises that stimulate and condition the cardiovascular system, Jacobson said.

An aerobic program was started at BYU three years ago, and has had spectacular success, according to Jacobson.

"At present, there are 17 teachers, with over 1200 students registered for daytime aerobic classes. In addition, a night class in the Smith Fieldhouse has an average daily attendance of 350 per class."

A television series called "Hooked on Aerobics" designed by Jacobson and filmed by KBYU, was released nationwide last year and has proved to be extremely popular, she said.

"The object of the series and the classes at BYU is to teach participation with an understanding of how to become physically fit, why it works, and how to maintain a style of fitness throughout your life."

The classes include a testing program that allows the participants to monitor their progress. Jacobson attributes the popularity of aerobics to the fun people have doing it.

"Everyone, from every kind of culture, moves to a rhythm. With the variety of music that we have and the simplicity of success, people are willing to try it," she said.

According to Dr. A. Garth Fisher, director of the Human Performance Research Center at BYU and a health columnist for the Desert News, people are more concerned about their health and are seeking "prevention rather than cure. Aerobics does more for you than any other sport."

Crossley to study in Washington

Y employee given fellowship

By EILEEN TRUJILLO
Senior Reporter

Ken Crossley, concert manager for the BYU Music Department, has received a fellowship with the Inter-Arts Program of the National Endowment for the Arts in Washington, D.C.

Crossley was one of the 15 selected for the program. He is the first person from Utah to receive this award.

The fellowship will last from June through August and will have Crossley working for the NEA staff, he said.

KEN CROSSLEY

While in Washington he will mostly work with grant applications, to determine what organizations will receive grants, Crossley said.

Other duties will consist of attending panel review sessions, researching policies and attending guest seminars, field trips and meetings with the National Council of the Arts, Crossley said.

"The NEA's Inter-Arts Program assists art projects and institutions that cross traditional discipline lines, such as literature, media arts, museums and musical theater," he explained.

"This fellowship is designed to bring the arts to the people," Crossley said.

Crossley said he attended Brigham Young University and graduated in university studies. The degree qualified him for an administrative position in the arts.

"There wasn't a program here that had business, communication and the arts all in one major, so I had to make up my own," Crossley said.

The degree paid off when Crossley graduated and BYU's Music Department asked him to work as the scheduling coordinator and negotiator for the university performing arts series and Music Department events, Crossley said.

Crossley later received his master's degree through the University of Utah in arts administration and through BYU in the theater department, he said.

Even as a child Crossley always had a love for the arts, he said. "I was lucky because my parents made sure I was exposed to the children's theater and all sorts of music and dance. "I enjoyed dance, but I figured if I couldn't be a performer there must be another way I could be close to the arts," he said.

As a member of the Community Outreach Grant Panel of the Utah Arts Council, Utah Citizens for the Arts, and the Western Alliance of Arts Administrators, Crossley was able to stay close to and improve the arts, he said.

Crossley feels the Utah Arts Council and the Western Alliance of Arts Administration has helped make this fellowship happen, and it will not only help him but also BYU.

"This fellowship will give me a greater experience to bring back to BYU and an opportunity to share ideas with those who sit on the National Council of the Arts," he said.

Singers to present concert

The Ralph Woodward Chorale will present their spring concert Wednesday in the Provo Tabernacle at 8 p.m.

The concert, titled "Russian Music Festival," will feature the works of composers such as Tchaikovsky, Grieg, Schvedor and Rachmaninoff. Operas from the Russian Church tradition such as the "Polovetzian Dances" from "Prince Igor" by Borodin will also be presented. Featured guest artist for the performance will be Canadian pianist Irene Perry. She will play several short works by Sergei Rachmaninoff. Tickets are available at the door.

1984 World's Fair in New Orleans to consist of six-month Mardi Gras

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — The 1984 World's Fair is trading United Nations platitudes and trade show gimmickry for a raucous six-month Mardi Gras — complete with the special "joie de vivre" most often found in its liquid form.

"This is a community that seems to genuinely 'joy the go-go,'" said Peter Spurney, president of the fair.

In New Orleans does what it does best, the thinking goes, the international brotherhood and hi-tech wizardry will simply happen. What is most technical to fair officials is throwing a huge street party May 12 through November 11 that could happen nowhere else in the world.

The arithmetic is staggering for this slice of Carnival on the banks of the Mississippi: $350 million in expenditures, $60 million in expected tax collections, more than $2 billion in economic impact.

It's all aimed at giving each person who plunks down $15 a swirling kaleidoscope of New Orleans — a multi-colored array of spicy food, stiff drinks, sultry music and useless zest.

If the backstage machinery creaks from time to time, the folks running the fair say that's part of the picture too.

"This area has a unique blend of cultural expressions," Spurney said. "The Louisiana love of music, good food and street celebrations, and its appreciation of and tolerance for a great diversity of designs, will make this exposition unique."

Water theme

The fair's theme is "The World of Rivers: Fresh Water as a Source of Life," but it is Mardi Gras that hits visitors smack in the face as soon as they enter beneath an archway adorned with mermaids, alligators and sea gods.

The $2.8 million Wonderland is part announcement of purpose and part self-effacing sign gag. It snakes through the site's central section with a mesmerizing array of buildings and facades, fountains, pools, stages, an aqueduct, rides and even video games.

Chastened by tales of mass confusion — of lost children and cursing adults — the exposition's planners decided to scale it down even as they were building it up.

A treasure chest of exhibits and amusements is divided into six comfortable "neighborhoods," mirroring the division of a noisy metropolis into pockets with all that's necessary for daily life. The first of these, Centennial Plaza, greets visitors as soon as they are inside.

The effect is softened by touches of the East, but present and future break in dramatically with exhibits on the petroleum industry and America's electric energy.

For an extra $3.50, a gondola takes riders across the greenish-brown expanse of the Mississippi River for a look back at the 82-acre fair site and the city that stretches in patches of old and new to the hazy blue horizon.

From Centennial Plaza, it's a quick (and free) trip by monorail to the International Riverfront neighborhood. Each participating nation seeks to show the importance of water to its history, economy and long-term survival.

In the 77,000-square-foot U.S. Pavilion, a "people mover" takes riders through a 90-foot narration on America and its rivers — from computer-gaily dissertations on water's properties to a funhouse with mirrors to show man's adaptability.

Also participating are the People's Republic of China, Egypt, Liberia, Canada, Australia, El Salvador, France, Israel, Italy, Mexico, South Korea, Peru and eight members of the European Economic Community — Belgium, Denmark, West Germany, Greece, Ireland, Luxembourg, the Netherlands and the United Kingdom.

NASA's 75-ton space shuttle Enterprise will be found along the riverfront, as will the fair's most impressive entertainment facility, a 5,500-seat covered amphitheater.

Acts signed for the six-month run range from Bob Hope and George Burns to Itzhak Perlman and the London Philharmonic, with room along the way for Count Basie, the Oak Ridge Boys, the Osmond Brothers and the Stuttgart Ballet.

Taking a turn of phrase from the Far East, the fair's designers have dubbed the third neighborhood the Great Hall.

The cavernous building, which after Nov. 11 will become the city's new Convention Center, features Louisiana's own pavilion and exhibits by Mississippi explorer Jacques Cousteau and the Federation of Churches. It also boasts pavilions dedicated to the achievements of women and blacks.

The neighborhood called Bayou Plaza is home to the Watergarden, a 1½-acre playground of valves and mythical beasts, and the Kid Wash, which gives children the same treatment cars get all too rarely.

Fountains of "water flowers" unfold in one section with a splash of translucent petals, while another area sports the first true aquadisc since 1939. Eight performances a day combine synchronized swimming, water ballet, comedy routines and high diving, all held together by special effects.

The adjacent Festival Park neighborhood has a special Louisiana flavor. A Cajun crawfish restaurant is the first course to the two stages of the Jazz and Gospel Tent, where 12 performances a day celebrate jazz, blues, country, reggae, folk, gospel, soul and zydeco, a cajun-flavored style of music.

Private developments include the Federal Fiber Mills restoration complete with a German beer hall, and the Italian Village, featuring glassblowers, puppets, flag-tossers and, of course, mountains of pasta.

Many visitors will use this taste of Rome as an introduction to the fair's most publicized exhibit — "Treasures From the Vatican." The exhibit's value is described as "beyond price," with its centerpiece alone — a 17th century painting by Caravaggio — appraised at $10 million.

The Vatican exhibit competes for special honors with the only major show outside the fair site. More than 200 items from the Louvre, Versailles and other French collections make up "The Sun King" exhibit at the Louisiana State Museum in the French Quarter.

A final zip along the monorail from Festival Park drops visitors off where they began, near the entrance with its mermaids and gods. But fair planners insist this need not be the end of the day — or night.

For here waits the truest neighborhood of all. Raised from a maze of garbage-strewn alleys, Fulton Mall serves as the fair's late night entertainment district, with more than 30 restaurants and retail outlets. A two-story air-conditioned warehouse holds the Louisiana Polka Festival, a peppy jambalaya of music, folk art and food.

Also in Fulton Mall, one of Louisiana's most celebrated entertainers puts a bit of his money where his mouth is. Clarinet great Pete Fountain is running the largest food, beverage and entertainment facility on the entire fair site — the $2 million, 825-seat Reunion Hall.

Christ's life teaches leadership, cadets told

By SUSAN SWANSON
Staff Writer

Philosophies abound on how to lead an organization, but studying the techniques of the Savior can enhance efforts at leadership, Maj. Gen. John L. Matthews told BYU's Army ROTC cadets at their annual awards banquet Thursday night.

Matthews, who is the adjutant general of the state of Utah and also commander of the Utah National Guard, told the cadets about practices he has found that will help them to be more effective leaders.

The first practice is leading by example, he said. "Be an example of what you expect your men to be. If you don't lead by example, you will have to lead by fear."

According to Matthews, many leaders operate on the assumption of "rank has its privileges," but there is an axiom to the rule.

Rank also has responsibility, and it is necessary to fulfill that responsibility also, he said.

A good leader also respects his men. "All men are children of God by nature and deserve your respect. Jesus loved and respected all people," Matthews said.

A leader must recognize that his men are worthy of his respect and that he has to earn theirs.

"A good leader takes ideas from everywhere. In my experience many good ideas have come from the minds of my associates," he said.

A good leader recognizes that he can make mistakes. "He knows there is nothing wrong with being wrong; the problem is not recognizing the weakness."

Finally, Matthews said a leader must stay in control. "Don't overreact to bad news."

A leader needs to act as a calming influence. If the leader loses control, a de facto leader will step forward.

Addressing the BYU cadets specifically, he said as members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, they have an insight that few people have, and they should teach by their example.

He illustrated how holding to principles can lead to respect from others with the story of a commander in the 6th Army who would not drink coffee in Matthews' presence.

"You cannot live a double life and keep the respect of those around you," he said.

Students to visit language fair

More than 3,000 foreign language students from public schools throughout Utah will be able to take simulated trips to Germany, Spain and France as one of the activities at BYU's annual Foreign Languages Fair today.

Paul Luckau, a professor of German, said the mock countries will include banks, restaurants, bakeries, railway stations and travel bureaus. "The German town is called Kleindeutschland and will be in the Tanner Building Atrium. The Spanish town is called Espanolandia and will be in the McKay Building, and the French town is called La Petite France and will be in the Jesse Knight Humanities Building."

"The towns are run by volunteer students, faculty members and community members who know about the countries. Students will be able to buy original commodities and food from the countries. They can exchange original currency from banks in the simulated countries," he said.

To enter a country the students have to have passports and get them stamped at "police stations." "It is going to be like a real visit to the native land," Luckau said.

While in the countries the students will be expected to speak only in the foreign tongue. "We may even have a native policeman to arrest people who are caught speaking English," Luckau said.

He said the purpose of the fair is to give students a live speaking experience so they can communicate fluently.

New home IVs lower hospital costs

A new home intravenous therapy program at Utah Valley Regional Medical Center can shorten hospital stays and save literally hundreds of dollars at hospital costs.

Candidates for home I.V. are hospital patients whose physicians prescribe I.V. support after discharge, as well as those whose physicians prescribe the treatment without prior hospitalization.

One recent patient at UVRMC, Gerald Johnson of Provo, underwent his fourth stomach operation and had been accustomed to the hospital routine after staying at the hospital for four weeks.

But because of the new home I.V. program, Johnson went home a little earlier than usual. "After three weeks I was ready to come home," Johnson said.

Patients who participate in the therapy must have someone at home who can help with the treatment. A registered nurse and pharmacist teach the patient and his assistant how to use the I.V. either before he leaves the hospital or after he goes home.

Children are not included in the service because of their more delicate fluid balance.

Better teaching methods called for

By JOYCE PENNELL
Staff Writer

The methods of teaching used in classrooms need to be improved through better educated teachers, a visiting professor of education said Friday at the annual spring conference for teacher educators in the Conference Center.

"When it comes to schooling, parents want much more than intellectual development," John Goodland, author of "A Place Called School," said during his keynote speech.

Schools are expected to deal with the highest cognitive processes and to help the students develop self-autonomy and a love of learning, he said.

"The degree to which we carry on in school reflects the array of expectations," he said. "Do we really care about only what we test?"

The use of different teaching methods declines steadily as students become more interested in peer groups, he said.

The students are relatively unconcerned about this, he said. "When we average our data across the board, we come up with a staggering figure of passivity."

Goodland's research, conducted in the mid-1970s, showed students said that out of the different methods used to teach them they liked listening to the teacher best.

"We become extraordinarily socialized into this process," Goodland said.

When teachers attempt to use a teaching method other than straight lecturing, students do not like it because they are surprised, he said.

The continued use of the present teaching methods is reinforced by various factors.

"Teachers teach the way they were taught when they were students," he said. "What teaching is for them is what they have seen from the time they were 5 years old."

Present teaching methods are reinforced by some cooperating teachers who say to their student teachers, "Forget what they've been teaching you in school — I'm going to show you what teaching is really like."

Teachers have two choices — they can continue to use conventional wisdom or be willing to change, Goodland said.

Housing experts say trends must be toward savings, less regulation

By CRAIG STEINBURG
Staff Writer

Homes can be more affordable if regulatory policies can be decreased. If housing trends are improved, and if innovative construction techniques are implemented, housing experts said during a forum Thursday.

The three-hour forum opened with remarks from Peter Herder, president of the National Association of Home Builders, who moderated the event.

He said builders need to be aware of many things when building a home in order to make it more attractive to a new market of people. "It is more than building a structure with bricks and mortar. We are putting together homes—we are in the people business."

Herder introduced the first speaker's topic by commenting on the need to reduce the number of regulatory processes, which add unnecessary costs to the price of a home. "About $30,000 to $35,000 is spent to get through the regulatory phase."

Shirley Weisman of the Department of Housing and Urban Development said housing costs can be affordable if two things happen. "It is a two-part equation. We need a reasonable regulation policy and a good economic policy."

She said the economic outlook is encouraging. Since 1981, the economy has taken a turn-around. "Five million new jobs have been created. Home production doubled in 1983. There has been a 37 percent growth in the sale of homes."

A streamlining of regulatory programs is also needed, Weisman said. By eliminating regulatory processing, the cost of homes can be cut by 20 percent.

She said there needs to be a joint effort in achieving affordable housing. "There needs to be a partnership with state and local government, the public and the private sector."

Arthur C. Danielian of Danielian Associated, a developing firm, spoke on the future trends of housing. He said builders need to respond to the changing market while making houses more affordable.

"We have to look at demographic and social changes," Danielian said. "People are living longer. Younger people are getting married later and have fewer children. This allows us to build smaller homes."

He said people are more energy conscious. Homes will be smaller and builders will have to build them closer to workplaces to help reduce gasoline consumption.

He gave a slide presentation of things developers are doing. One method clusters homes in a circle around each other, creating "micro-communities." He said clusters make a more aesthetic community and are safer for children. Clusters also limit traffic noise.

Danielian said many homes are being built smaller but are designed to appear larger through higher ceilings, which bring more light into rooms. "They demonstrate more open space — we are bringing more natural light into the home."

Man pleads guilty to manslaughter charge

Chester Boone entered a plea of guilty to the charge of second-degree manslaughter before Judge George E. Ballif in 4th District Court on Friday.

Boone, 34, of Spring Lake, was arrested in February in connection with the death of Nina Jane Yazzie, 34, of Spring Lake. Yazzie was pronounced dead on arrival at the Mountain View Hospital in Payson on Feb. 28.

Boone's case was referred to the Adult Probation and Parole Department for a pre-sentence investigation. He is scheduled for sentencing before Ballif on April 27.

Boone is in the Utah County Jail pending his sentencing.

Thomas G. Bird, 19, of 649 E. Swenson No. 5, in Springville, entered a plea of not guilty to the charge of forcible sexual abuse, a second-degree felony, before Judge J. Robert Bullock.

Bird is scheduled to appear before Judge David Sam on Friday at 8:30 a.m. for trial setting.

Also before Bullock, a Murray man pleaded not guilty to the charge of auto theft, a second-degree felony.

Richard Baker, 23, of 5591 S. Sandford

Dr. was arrested on Oct. 23 in connection with a car that was taken from a local car rental agency.

Baker is scheduled to appear before Judge Cullen Y. Christensen for trial setting Friday at 9:30 a.m.

He is in the Utah County Jail with bail set at $25,000.

James M. Brady, 36, address unknown, also appeared before Bullock and entered a plea of not guilty to the charge of writing bad checks exceeding $1,000 over a six-month period.

Mudslide in Salt Lake blocks off canyon road

A mudslide temporarily blocked off Emigration Canyon in Salt Lake City on Sunday night.

"The slide occurred about 7:30 p.m. It was about 10 feet wide and 3 to 5 feet deep," said a spokesman for the Utah State public works commission.

The road was closed for about two hours while crews cleaned up the debris, he said.

"There wasn't enough debris to do any damage to the river. Traffic had to be diverted through Parley's Canyon for a while, but the road was reopened quite quickly," he said.

The Public Works Commission is anticipating more slide activities, but is not looking at any specific areas, he said.

Small fire breaks out at Wyview Park causing $300 damage to trailer

A small fire broke out at 126 Wyview Park, a university-owned trailer park in Provo, on Sunday and caused an estimated $300 damage to a mobile home.

The Provo Fire Department responded to the call at about 2:40 p.m. According to University Police Chief Robert Kelsaw, the fire may have been caused by a water heater malfunction.

Damage was done to the water heater and the floor of the trailer. There was also some smoke damage, he said.

The residents of the trailer were home when the fire broke out but they escaped unharmed.

Panel discusses elements that make up women's roles

Homemaking requires self-discipline and can challenge women to the limits of their ability, according to Paula Thomas, a full-time homemaker and mother of seven children.

Thomas, a BYU graduate and wife of a BYU law professor, spoke to students Thursday as part of a panel discussion on the balancing act a woman must perform as she decides what roles to pursue in and out of the home.

Different situations and different personalities result in different choices and different lifestyles for each woman, said another panelist, Ann Thomas, a wife and mother of four children, who represented the married woman still continuing her education.

"We all have to decide what we value and what we value differently," she said. "We just have to realize that we are all different."

Vickie Anderson, a married woman who teaches at the BYU College of Nursing, said she chose to work because she believes that it is important to have a marketable skill.

"The choices I have made, I feel, are right for me," she said. "I don't think it's possible for anyone to be everything."

Peggy Powell and Nancy Johnson, single parents, began a business together to support themselves and their families. One of the challenges Johnson said they faced was fear.

"It's so easy to let the fear (of failure) stop you from excelling," she said. "We feel it's important that women know that there are many options open to us."

"Each of us has within us the capacity to do unbelievable things," said Aileen Clyde, a wife and grandmother who has spent years in volunteer and community service.

... College students in the Living Scriptures three year summer employment program average over $15,000 per summer, several of our second, third, and fourth year representatives earned over $40,000 — our top second-year representative earned over $60,000 in thirteen weeks.

These figures become even higher when you add in the thousands of dollars in bonuses you will earn this summer. Bonuses such as a weeks vacation to Cancun, Mexico (with the most beautiful beaches in the world and the great Book of Mormon ruins) color TV's, VCR's, microwaves, stereos, and much more.

This is all believable when you consider the Living Scriptures professional training program.
